

PRESIDENT'S AIDES LAUNCH DRIVE TO ENACT RELIEF LAWS

Want Congress Action On Four Great Measures
This Week

CONGRESS MAY BALK

May Force Roosevelt to Make Showdown on Debts and Tariff

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 10.—President Roosevelt's spokesmen launched a drive in Congress today to complete enactment this week of the four great relief measures affecting farm relief; currency inflation; Federal emergency taxation; operation of Muscle Shoals and protection of the investment public.

Unless Congress balks in an effort to force an immediate showdown of the President's attitude toward debts and tariff revision, these four great bills will be enacted before the end of the week.

The Farm Relief-inflation bill will go to the White House as soon as the Senate abandons its championship of the Simpson plan for government fixing of farm prices. The House rejected this plan while approving all other proposals agreed upon by the House and Senate conferees. The Senate was expected to concur in this decision.

The Emergency Tax bill should pass by tomorrow. The Senate Finance Committee reported it with provisions imposing a Federal gasoline tax of 1c a gallon for another year; a tax of 2 per cent on gross rates of electric power companies to domestic and commercial users and a one per cent sales tax on industrial consumers. It also would reduce the local postal rates from 3c to 2c and would authorize the President to readjust other rates to get greater revenue.

Senate and House leaders were in complete accord on the Norris bill for government operation of the $100,000,000 project at Muscle Shoals. The bill was sent to conference by the House but a prompt agreement was not reached.

A written approval of the conference report was predicted by Friday. The new Federal "Blue Sky" law also was sent to conference. There are some differences, but administration leaders predicted a prompt agreement, and final enactment of the bill by the end of the week.

BRISTOL CUBANS TIGHTEN GRIP ON FIRST PLACE

Hand Fergusonville Their First Defeat of The Season

WHITE ELEPHANTS WIN

The Bristol Cubans took undisputed possession of first place in the Bristol Suburban League last night on the Pine street diamond, shutting out the Fergusonville team, 3-0. It was the first defeat of the season for the Fergusonville team and the third consecutive win for the colored boys.

The Cubans scored their three runs in the initial frame and were aided by the misplays of the Fergusonville team. Fergusonville threatened several times but could not get the punch to drive the tallies over the plate.

"Jimmy" Spencer and "Tim" McCoy were the hurriers in this pitching duel. McCoy gave up but two scratch hits while Spencer allowed three. McCoy fanned nine and Spencer seven.

The White Elephants handed the West Bristol A. C. their third straight defeat on the West Bristol grounds last night, nosing out the losers, 3-2.

The West Bristol team scored both of their runs in the first inning and then were blanked the rest of the game. The Elephants scored in the first and then put across the winning tally in the second.

The fielding of G. Ritter and Brescia was the feature of the game. Williams led the hitters with two hits.

Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean, Washington newspaper publisher and owner of the ill-fated Hope Diamond, is pictured as she arrived at the District Supreme Court at the opening of the trial of Gaston B. Means, former Department of Justice employee, and Norman Whitaker, on a charge of attempting to defraud Mrs. McLean of $35,000 on a promise of effecting the return of the Lindbergh baby. At right Means is shown in the corridor of the court, and in inset is Mrs. Means, the accused man's wife. The prosecutors charge that Means obtained $104,000 previous to his attempt to acquire the sum mentioned in the indictment. Colonel Lindbergh is expected to testify in the case.

MOTHER'S SCREAMS SAVES TWO BABIES

Firemen Had Overlooked Tots
Until Told By Mother

BOTH WERE RESCUED

PHILADELPHIA, May 10.—Two small children, overlooked by firemen who rescued their parents from a fire-swept home, were saved early today when their mother, recovering from the effects of smoke, began screaming for "my babies."

The fire started on the first floor of the dwelling and had spread to the staircase before the barking of a pet dog aroused Anthony Kioda. With escape by way of the stairs cut off, Kioda marshalled his wife and two children into a second floor front bedroom.

Firemen carried the father and mother, both partially overcome by smoke, down a ladder to safety. Unaware anyone else was in the structure the firemen had turned their attentions to checking the spread of the flames when Mrs. Kioda regained consciousness and screamed for her children.

They were found, unconscious from smoke, on a bed, and were revived by a police surgeon and sent to a hospital for treatment. Neither is in any danger, physicians said.

Friday guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. Russell Burton, Radcliffe street, will be Mr. and Mrs. P. K. Conrad, Erwinna.

HISTORY OF CHINA'S RETREAT

PAPER READ BY
EDWARD R. BARNESLEY
BEFORE THE
BUCKS COUNTY HISTORICAL SOCIETY
AT DOYLESTOWN, MAY 6, 1933

"Sometimes there was no food and always the lodgings were bad. At times some of the bearers deserted because they were ineffectually paid by the mandarins, who wished to make a profit out of the money allowed for the trip. Strict instructions had been received that they must reach Peking before the Chinese New Year and so long marches were made and eight of the carriers died from exhaustion. When finally on January 10 Peking was reached, the Embassy were kept waiting two hours while their quarters were made clean and habitable. It is no wonder that van Braam complained of losing five inches in girth! "A month was spent in Peking and the ambassadors were received in audience on several occasions by the Emperor, Chien Lung, to congratulate whom on reaching the 60th year of his reign was the ostensible reason for the embassy. After a friendly reception—of course, on the basis of "tribute-bearers"—the return journey was begun on February 15. This much less unpleasant than the journey north, partly owing to the milder weather and to the slower rate of travel, and partly because more of the distance was covered by boat."

The embassy returned on May 10, 1795, to where it started, and it is supposed that van Braam resumed his duties as chief of the direction of the Dutch East India Company. At last his age, the success that at-

U. S. AND GREAT BRITAIN AGREE
London, England, May 10.—The first obstacle to a successful launching of the World Economic Conference was cleared today when the United States and Great Britain reached complete agreement on a revised formula for the international tariff truce proposed by President Roosevelt.

Official notification was received here that the United States had agreed to take the formula which now has the approval of the British Government.

It provides safeguards for low tariff countries for the duration of the truce.

News of America's acceptance of the revised plan was received while the British cabinet was giving final consideration to the proposal.

KENNETH MAY PAY PRICE

Harwich, Mass., May 10.—Kenneth Buck will "pay the price" for the kidnapping of Peggy McMath. His brother Cyril, his tool, may get "a break." This was the sentiment generally today as authorities cleaned up loose ends of the case and proceeded with plans to have the special grand jury indict the pair within a fortnight with a view to bringing them to trial as expeditiously as possible.

Kenneth Buck's new "confession," sworn to and signed, that he alone was to blame and responsible for the kidnapping, disposed of his previous intimation that "someone else" was "in" on the job who had not been apprehended.

As a result of this new statement, a revision to Kenneth's confession of last Saturday night, police activity died down to almost a standstill today. Authorities were convinced the case is "clinched" with the 28-year-old Kenneth Buck standing forth as the "brains" and the amateur executor of the crime.

In contrast to the plight of Kenneth, the predicament of Cyril is inciting some sympathy in the community. Cyril's attitude at the arraignment on Monday, when he wanted to "proceed at once," while Kenneth was asking for a delay, has convinced many that Cyril may be telling the truth when he insisted he had nothing to conceal.

FORMER BRISTOL TOT TO APPEAR IN MOVIES

June Filmer to Be On Screen
at Grand Theatre
Tonight

HAS SPEAKING PART

About June Filmer, a pretty tot who lived for some time in Bristol, is the story of "Rock-A-Bye" built. The film features Constance Bennett, and in the picture little June has a big part to play. She appears in many scenes and has a number of speaking parts. The picture will be shown at the Grand Theatre this evening.

June lived at Wilson and Garfield streets until 3½ years ago, when her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Filmer moved to California. Last fall word was received here that June had been chosen from a large number of children to take part in the play, "Rock-A-Bye." The former Bristol tot was recognized as "the greatest child find" in many years. RKO signed her to a seven-year contract. No child had ever been signed to a motion picture contract covering this number of years, it is stated, the longest previous being five years.

During the period in which Mr. Filmer resided here he was employed at the Keystone Aircraft Corporation factory. When he left Bristol it was with plans made to accept a position in an aircraft factory on the Pacific coast.

FILES SUIT AGAINST LOCAL TROLLEY COMPANY

Claims Trolley Jumped Switch
And Ran Into Tractor

MAKES CLAIM OF $1017.50

Because a car, operated by an employee of the Philadelphia, Trenton & Bristol Railway Company jumped the track while crossing a switch and ran into a truck owned by Miller's Quaker City Trucking Company, Philadelphia, a damage suit was filed in the Prothonotary's office at Doylestown. A claim is made for $1017.50.

Elmer Lickens, Andalusia, operated the plaintiff's truck. The accident happened November 12, 1931. It is alleged the car left the track and crashed into the left hand side of the plaintiff's tractor.

In a suit filed, Lloyd Cressman, of Richland, claims $2000 damages as the result of crashing into a telephone pole with his car. According to the statement of claim, Cressman was operating his car along the highway between Center Valley and Bethlehem. He alleges a guy wire, dangling from the telephone line which was running parallel with the highway, extended across the road, and caused him to strike the pole to avoid hitting the wire. His car, it was stated, was damaged to the extent of $170. However, it was depreciated to the extent of $370. For personal injuries, the defendant claims the sum of $2000. The defendant is the Bell Telephone Company.

Alleging that his wife, Gertrude R. Brown, deserted his home, William M. Brown filed a libel in divorce in the Court of Common Pleas. According to the libel, they were married February 10th, 1923, in Philadelphia. The alleged desertion took place more than a year ago. The libellant, who gave his address as Lincoln Highway, near Morrisville, averred his wife subjected him to cruel and barbarous treatment. Her address it was alleged is 405 Fishers avenue, Philadelphia.

TWO RELAY TEAMS TO RUN AT MEET HERE SATURDAY

Thirteenth Annual Event To Be Held at Bristol High School Grounds

STARTS AT 9.30 A. M.

Reclassification of Schools Will Add to The Interest

The thirteenth annual meet of Bucks County public schools will be held on Bristol high school field, Saturday, beginning at 9.30 a. m.

Competition will be especially keen this year because of the large number of schools competing. The reclassification of schools this year for inter-scholastic and athletic competition will also add materially to the efforts of the contestants and interest of the spectators. It is estimated that there will be many more contestants than in any previous year.

Due to economic conditions, officers of the meet have made no solicitations for funds to help defray the expenses of the meet as has been done in previous years. Due to the smaller income, fewer awards will be given and the strictest economies effected.

Two relay teams, each placing second in the Penn Relay Carnival held at Franklin Field, will participate in the meet. This fact alone should make this particular event of real interest.

Schools competing: Class A (high schools)—Bensalem, Bristol, Langhorne-Middletown, Morrisville, Newtown, Quakertown, Sellersville-Perkasie.

Class B (high schools)—Falls Township, Hilltown, New Hope, Nockamixon, Richboro, Springfield, Upper Southampton, Yardley.

Class C (grammar schools)—Bensalem, Bristol Borough, Bristol Township, Falls Township, Langhorne-Middletown, Morrisville, Quakertown, Sellersville-Perkasie.

Class D (grammar schools)—Hulmeville, Lower Makefield, New Hope, Newtown, Nockamixon, Tullytown, Upper Southampton, Warminster, Yardley.

AN IMPORTANT POST

The resignation of Rear Admiral Byrd as chairman of the National Economy League should not be permitted to cause the organization to relax its activities in the cause of lowering the cost of government.

Under the leadership of Admiral Byrd, the league proved an effective force in enlightening the public as to the waste and extravagance in national and local government and in bringing about a reduction in public expenditures, especially with respect to the national government. He was severely attacked at times by elements which found themselves in the path of the league's economy program. These attacks did not cause him to relax his efforts in furthering the purposes of the league.

Because of the "imperative" need of giving attention to his personal affairs, however, he now has found it necessary to lay aside the chairmanship. But in quitting, he reminds the organization and the country at large that there is much for the league to do, and he urges that "new concrete objectives" be found. "State and local spending is still too high," he emphasizes, but cautions against unwise economies. "The pruning of these governmental costs," he explains, "is not a job for the broadaxe. Only careful investigation and study can point the way. That is one of the things the league can assist in doing."

The league, organized to arouse public opinion against unwise spending of public monies, quickly grew into a formidable organization covering the nation. If its influence is to continue and increase it must have strong, resourceful leadership.

Much care, therefore, needs to be exercised in choosing a successor to Admiral Byrd. The position is one that requires intelligence and aggressiveness of a high order if worthwhile work is to be accomplished.

WORLD TRADE OUTLOOK

A development that is of important significance in connection with America's foreign trade prospects is the placing of contracts amounting to nearly $2,000,000 by Pan-American Airways for six large transport planes capable of crossing the ocean. The company, in addition, is planning the early awarding of contracts totaling $1,100,000 for miscellaneous flying equipment for its 26,000 miles of airways.

The decisive factor in causing the directors to order the new flying boats, said Juan T. Trippie, president, was the expectation that world trade conditions would be greatly improved, by the time the order can be filled.

Pan-American's lines now cover the Caribbean and South America and include in their network the key airways of Alaska and China, with the prospect that the United States and the Far East ultimately will be connected.

General revival of world trade will find this company prepared for its share of it. There is little doubt that air transportation will play an important part in trade recovery.

Officials of Pan-American would not be adding to their equipment and planning expansion of operations if they did not believe an upturn to be near. They are well situated for sizing up world trade conditions, present and prospective.

HISTORY OF CHINA'S RETREAT

who was to be his housekeeper at China's Retreat and about whom we shall hear more later; and a young Malay man named Kinties whom van Braam sent to Holland where he was educated as a physician but was unfortunately drowned upon returning to his native country.

Van Braam also brought with him, besides his wonderful collection of Oriental objects of art, a service of tea china which he had made especially for Martha Washington. This set of hard paste porcelain, known as Chinese Lowestoft, was, of course, not used in the White House, as the federal government did not move to the District of Columbia until 1800; however, the First Lady prized it very highly at Mount Vernon, and at her death in 1802 she bequeathed it to her grandson George Washington Parke Custis. Two of the original pieces are on exhibition at the White House; three in the National Museum; and one in the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

The design of this set is rather unique. In the center of the plate appears the interlaced monogram M. W. on a gold disk representing the rising sun of the Republic. It is surrounded by a wreath of laurel leaves symbolizing peace. From the wreath extend rays of gold touching a chain composed of fifteen large links with the name of one of each of the fifteen states at that time in the Union. (Vermont joined the original thirteen states on March 4, 1791, and Kentucky on June 1, 1792). A ribbon scroll on the sun's rays has the words "Decus et Tutamen ab Illo" inscribed on it. It refers to the Union and is translated "A Glory and a Defense from That." Around the endless chain of states is entwined a serpent with its tail in its mouth, the symbol of eternity. On the outer edge is a gold band.

This china has been much copied, not only in America, but in France and England also. The writer has been able to trace at least six different reproductions, most of which are poor except the excellent one of last year which was made for the Bicentennial.

Van Braam also brought with him into Philadelphia a fortune of several hundred thousand dollars that he had amassed during his eight or nine years of business in China, and a valuable collection of works of art, furniture, paintings, natural history specimens, etc., that cost him at least another fortune. During his long stay in China he employed two skillful painters who were five years engaged in painting the representations of the principal places and most important scenery of the Empire. He also had a collection of natural curiosities such as stuffed birds and other animals; and several artificial mountains, representing in a natural manner various Chinese scenery.

All these paintings and curiosities, after being shown at Philadelphia during May and June, were taken to China's Retreat as soon as the building was finished. Here they were exhibited to those lovers of art who cared to examine them; and they were pronounced by all who saw them to be the greatest collection of the kind ever exhibited in the United States.

One must remember that this was the year 1796—before the days of museums; there was no Smithsonian, and the old Academy of Natural Sciences was not yet thought of. This was over fifty years before Dr. Charles Haffnagle, who is generally regarded as being the first collector in Bucks County, exhibited his curiosities at Springdale.

While van Braam was boarding in Philadelphia he met, through his friend Talleyrand, one Mederic Louis Elie Moreau de Saint Mary. This man called Moreau was a French emigre who lived some four years in this city publishing books in French and for a while printing a French newspaper. When he saw van Braam and heard his stories of the then little known China he naturally became interested and finally persuaded van Braam to let him print his Journal of the Embassy to the Emperor of China at Peking. Moreau published the first volume in 1797, and the second in 1798. Five hundred copies of volume one were shipped to London, but the boat was captured by a French privateer and brought into Nantes. Thereupon, an enterprising Paris publisher reprinted this in two small volumes in 1798.

That same year these two volumes, containing only the subject matter, of course, of volume 1 of the original edition, were translated into English and printed in London. Later a German edition appeared at Leipzig and in 1804 and 1806 a Dutch translation was published at Haarlem. So it is seen that van Braam's book must have been popular to have been printed in five countries. These various editions are now rare, and are much sought after by the collectors. In the first volume of all the editions there is an elaborate dedication by van Braam to His Excellency, George Washington, President of the United States of America.

By May 1796 van Braam had gotten his party and collections settled so he sent a coach to Goshen, N. Y., to fetch his daughter Everarda Roberts and her three little sons, the oldest two of whom were then in school. Shortly after the family arrived the old gentleman was taken sick,—but let his grandson Cincinnatus Roberts tell about it:

"In the midst of our hilarity and merriment, my grandfather became very sick, and in a few days was pronounced by his physician to be dangerously ill with a malignant fever. This illness nearly ended his days, but he finally recovered and soon after, on June 6, 1796, made a purchase of a farm called Mount Benger, situated 17 miles up the Delaware river.

On June 19 Andreas was still in Philadelphia, for on that day Moreau makes the following entry in his diary: "I took Volney to the home of Mr. van Braam. There we examined all the curious things that he had imported from China." It is not known exactly when he moved to Bucks County; concerning this Cincinnatus says:

"Shortly after the purchase we all moved on the farm and my grandfather commenced making preparations for building a large mansion to be called China's Retreat, which he afterwards accomplished. He commenced by engaging his head carpenter and mason from Philadelphia. They commenced by pulling down the old house, with the exception of the two wings, which were occupied by the family and workmen. My mother remained with my grandfather, and I was sent over the river to Burlington Academy."

CHAPTER XXXVII

It was a day or two after Christmas that Kim said to Mary Faith:

"Did Claire say anything to you about a party on New Year's Eve? Jack tells me they're planning a party for that night. Would you like to go?"

Mary Faith knew what a New Year's Eve party at the Maldon home would be like. The tea-wagon would be loaded with glasses and bottles and cracked ice. There would be more cracked ice in the kitchen. The bridge tables would be set up, and there would be frozen fruit salad and toasted cheese and anchovy paste sandwiches. There would be drinking and dancing and a great deal of noise. Kim would disappear into the kitchen to help Claire make punch, and his gray eyes would become glazed and bloodshot as the night wore on.

"No, I don't want to go," Mary Faith said. "For one thing, I don't like to leave the baby. We'll be gone most of the night, and your mother sleeps so soundly. Suppose he kicked off his covers and caught cold—"

"Oh, piffle! Mother will take care of him," Kim broke in. "Send my dinner jacket to be pressed, will you?"

Then it turned out that Mother Farrell wouldn't be able to take care of the baby. She told Mary Faith that Dr. Thatcher had invited her to go to the theater with him that night. "And afterward we're going to the Hofbrau for supper," she said. "I don't know what I'm going to wear. I haven't a thing."

She spent half the day poking among her handboxes and trunks. At one o'clock on the day before New Year's she decided to go downtown and get a new dress with the money that Kim and Aunt Ella had given to her for Christmas. She did not return until six o'clock, and she found Mary Faith waiting for her in the sitting room, hatted and cloaked for the street.

"Oh, I'm so glad you're here!" Mary Faith greeted her. "The market closes at half past six, and I want to go down and pick out my chickens for tomorrow's dinner. I'll be right back. Go ahead and get dressed. When Kim comes, tell him we aren't going to the party. He'll be glad to hear it, I imagine. He wasn't particularly enthusiastic about going."

She hurried out into the street. There had been a high wind and a snowstorm that afternoon, but now everything was clear and bright. It would be pleasant to stay at home with Kim—far pleasanter than spending the evening in the chaos of the Maldon flat.

"I want two nice tender hens," she told Joe, the smiling, red-faced butcher.

"Three dollars and eighty cents," said Joe, after weighing the hens. "How did you like that goose liver sausage yesterday?"

Yesterday? Why, yesterday she hadn't even been in the meat market. Kim had telephoned early in the afternoon that he would not be home for dinner, and she and Mrs. Farrell had had a pick-up supper.

"I wondered if you wanted to pay for it now," Joe was saying. "Mr. Farrell forgot to." He slammed open the metal drawer of his cash register and laid a slip of paper before her. On it was written in blue pencil: Farrell. Two pounds goose-liver sausage—$1.20.

She knew that there was no mistake. But why had Kim bought two pounds of goose-liver sausage?

He was at home when she got there. She could hear him singing as she entered the flat. The bathroom door stood open, and from the hall she watched him for a moment as he stood before the mirror, shaving.

"Kim," she said, "did you buy two pounds of goose-liver sausage at Joe's yesterday?"

"I did. What of it?"

"Nothing, I suppose. But I had to pay for it just now, and Kim, two pounds of goose-liver sausage is such a funny thing to buy. No one person could eat two pounds of that rich stuff."

"Wait a minute!" He let out a

"I wondered if you wanted to pay for it now," Joe was saying. "Mr. Farrell forgot to."

short angry laugh. "I'll explain the great mystery to you, and then you get out and let me finish shaving in peace, will you?"

He slung his towel over the rack and went on. "Yesterday I drove Jack Maldon out from town, and he asked me to go up to his place to have a drink. After we'd had a couple of highballs, it was time for dinner. I told Claire I'd go out and buy some kind of cooked meat, so she wouldn't have to fuss around the kitchen. She and Jack suggested that I call you up, but I knew you'd have a fit if you saw me taking a drink, and besides I knew we'd both be there tonight—"

"We aren't going," Mary Faith cut in. "Your mother's going out with Dr. Thatcher, and we'll have to stay home with the baby."

All her anticipation of happiness for the evening was dead. The warm lovely feeling that had lain around her heart all day was gone. Kim had not only lied to her the night before, but just now he had admitted to her that he hadn't wanted her on the party the night before. He had told her—as good as told her—that she spoiled his fun.

"I think one of us ought to go over there tonight," his voice cut across her thoughts sharply. "They'll be hurt, if one of us doesn't show up. . . . Did you have my dinner jacket pressed?"

"I pressed it myself last night," she said dully.

Forever after, that New Year's Eve lived in Mary Faith's memory as a nightmare that went on and on and on through endless hours. At half past seven Dr. Thatcher called for Mrs. Farrell. At nine o'clock Kim left for the Maldons' party. He went without kissing Mary Faith good-bye, but he did tell her that he would be home early. "Long before twelve o'clock," he promised.

Left alone, Mary Faith busied herself for a half hour putting away the things that he and Mrs. Farrell had left lying about. Both were as careless as children when it came to taking care of their belongings.

On her way back to the sitting room she stopped to see if the baby was warm and snug, and to marvel, for the thousandth time, at his likeness to his father. She bent over him and kissed his tiny cheek. The touch, light and swift as it was, gave her a feeling of peace. Here was her love for Kim and his love for her. Herself and Kim, forever and ever. She settled herself on the sitting room couch to read and wait. Ten, eleven, and then twelve o'clock crept slowly by, and Kim had not kept his promise to come back early. Some time after the sound of the midnight bells had died away, she felt into a doze. She was awakened by voices. Then a key turned in the lock, and Mrs. Farrell came in, holding a pink paper parasol and dangling a cowbell from one wrist.

"Just look at these things! They were giving them away at the restaurant where we had supper," she cried, as Mary Faith started up from the couch. "I never saw such crowds in my life! We had to go to three places before we could get a thing to eat! I haven't had such a good time in thirty years," she went on. "Kimberley's father never took me out anywhere after we were married. But he was a great one for running out himself every night in the week—and I'd sit up and wait for him to come home, just as you're doing, Mary Faith, this very minute. . . . And I can see now, after all these years, that it's the wrong thing to do. A wife's place is at her husband's side, after all, isn't it? If she doesn't take that place, some other woman will. Don't you think that's so?"

She went right on talking while Mary Faith sat turning her words over and over in her mind. Perhaps Mrs. Farrell was right. Perhaps that was the way to hold Kim. To go wherever he went, instead of staying at home watching the clock and waiting for him.

"I think I'll go over to Maldons' if you don't mind," she said suddenly. "I won't be gone more than an hour. If I don't go, Kim will probably stay there until daybreak."

She telephoned for a taxicab and while she was waiting for it she slipped into an old sapphire-blue party dress that made her eyes look theatrically large and dark, and hunted up a pair of silver brocade slippers that she had bought long before her wedding day. . . . How many miles she had danced in them with Kim, and how jolly and innocent and decent their amusements had been in the long-ago days before he joined the Maldon crowd.

WOMEN SMARTER THAN LEOPARDS; TO CHANGE SPOTS THIS SEASON

By Alice Langelier
(L. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

PARIS—(INS)—The smart woman is bound to be spotted this spring and summer. Checks, prints and motifs of every size and variety are particularly gay.

One of the designers is using silk muslin plaids with tiny round spots in the corners. Jenny has some with spots of different sizes, sparsely spread. Schiaparelli also uses spots for extremely simple afternoon frocks.

Another dressmaker favors figured and spotted muslin for evening dresses in a new way; the skirt is draped fully at the back in deep loops and on one shoulder is a big spray of flowers made of the dress material and the opposite shoulder is simply draped.

Patou trims one shoulder of a spotted evening gown with closely-carled feathers in a long spray and on the other wrist puts a scarlet feather bracelet.

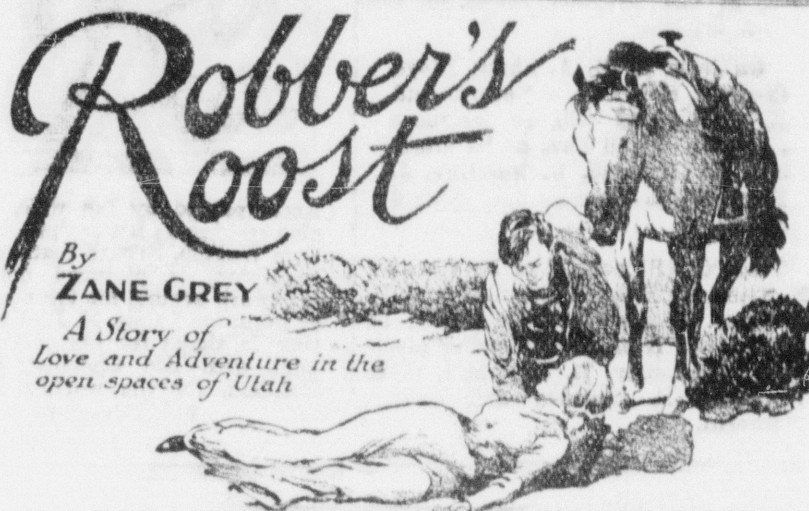

Sprinkled with tiny spots is a green wool frock with scarf and rolled epaulettes of plaid.

Black spotted tulle provides an Edwardian revival by way of a big neckboa and large choux on the dressy hat to match.

As F. D. R. Reported Progress

Accounting for his two-months' stewardship of the nation, President Roosevelt is pictured as he delivered a nation-wide radio broadcast from the White House on the economic situation—what has been done and what is to be done. The President explained his recovery program and promised to use the powers granted him by Congress if, and when, it becomes necessary.

HULMEVILLE BLANKS BRISTOL A. A. NINE

Hulmeville A. A. broke into the win column of the Lower Bucks County League last night on Sullivan's field when Howard Black blanked the Bristol A. A. club, 2-0. It was the first win in 3 starts for the Hulmeville club which won the first half of the league last season.

In shutting out the A's, Black was in fine form. He was touched for three singles and only in the third inning was there any danger of the A. A. putting any runs across. In this inning, a single by Fine and a walk to Stromp placed two men on with no one out. But the next three men were easy outs and Black earned his shutout.

Hulmeville connected for six hits from the delivery of "Milt" Jones and was aided by an error in the scoring of their two runs in the third inning. F. Cook started this frame with a pass. He took third on Harrison's single and scored when Wilkinson made an error of Watson's grounder. Harrison was forced at third, advancing Watson to second where he crossed on Black's hit.

The Langhorne Colored Giants remained undefeated in their second start of the Lower Bucks County League at Langhorne, whitewashing the Bristol Odd Fellows, 8-0. It was the first defeat of the season for the "Oddies."

"Bill" Derry was the twirler for the colored team and was found for five hits. Still and Beaton got two each while the other bingle was credited to Praul. Derry fanned seven stickers and was flanked by errorless support by his mates.

"Turner" Ashby was on the bill at the start for the Odd Fellows but did not last, being relieved by Still in the third inning. The fielding of Lamar for the winners stood out.

The Parkland-A. O. H. game was called off because of wet grounds. This game will be played at Parkland on Saturday afternoon.

Clarence Powell, of Bristol Township, will ride "Daigan," the fast Canadian steeplechaser owned by Raymond Hunt, of the Bristol Riding Club, in the mile and one-half steeplechase race to be held next Saturday at the Radnor Hunt Club.

This same horse will compete in the steeplechase events to be held at Rose-tree, and the flat race to be held at Hatfield next week. Young Powell has taken out a license as a jockey for these events. "Daigan," a bay gelding, caused quite a furore when he outdistanced the field in the races held here last Sunday a week. . . . and is expected to give a good account of himself in faster company.

Canzoneri's Weakness

By BURNLEY

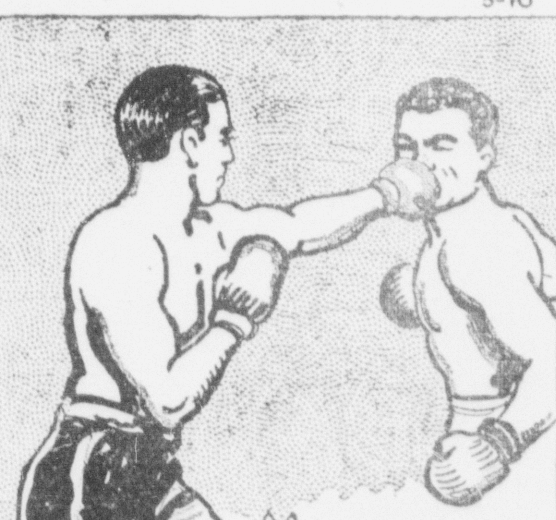

THE FLAW

IN CANZONERI'S FISTIC ARMOR ---
HE IS EASILY HIT BY A LEFT JAB
WES RAMEY BEAT TONY A COUPLE OF WEEKS AGO BY USING A JABBING ATTACK!

BARNEY ROSS IS
THAN A JABBER---AND TONY
DOES WELL WITH HOOKERS!

MANDELL,
CHOCOLATE, JADICK,
AND EVEN THE SLUGGER
PETROLLE, GAVE TONY

SOME of the boys were surprised when the news came over the wires a couple of weeks ago that Tony Canzoneri had been decisively whipped in a non-title go with Wesley Ramey, Grand Rapids youngster. A lot of people had been tagging Tony as a lightweight champion on a par with Leonard and Gans and the other immortals who have held the 135-pound scepter, so it was quite a jolt to these folks when the titleholder went out and got himself a neat pasting at the hands of a youngster like Ramey.

Some little wisecracks weren't particularly shocked by the upset, however, and even went so far as to say that they had expected it all along. According to these smart boys, Canzoneri has a fatal defect in his fistic armor that will prevent him from ever taking rank with Leonard or Lavigne unless and until he corrects it. They say that he carries his hands too low to cope with a very fast and accurate head puncher, and that he is a mark for a left jab—especially a good repeat left jab which will prevent him from crossing his right after the first jab lands.

The inescapable fact is that the moon-faced Italian has always been bothered by a left-jabbing attack. Mandell several years ago poured a steady stream of straight lefts into the Canzoneri pan to beat him, and the flashing Sammy was away past his peak at the time, too. Johnny Jadick, hardly a first rater, took two verdicts over Tony in the past year or so by employing a left jab almost exclusively. Kid Chocolate jabbed Canzoneri's face into a swollen mask in their fight at Madison Square Garden, and only Tony's weight and strength enabled him to edge out the frail Cuban.

Why, I saw old Uncle Will Petrolle jab Canzoneri time and again in their last fight, and when a guy like Petrolle, with his slow, deliberate straight left, can keep parking it in Canzoneri's mush, you must admit that it looks as if Tony has no adequate defense for that kind of bunch.

Ramey licked him with the left jab, according to the accounts, constantly breaking up Tony's bull-like rushes with perfectly timed stabs.

For my part, I'd like Barney Ross's chances against Canzoneri much better if he were more of the jabbing type, but, as I understand it, little Barney is a left-hook artist. Tony is a master at handling the left-hookers, so it doesn't look as if he made any mistake in signing up for the Ross fight at Chicago in June.

Anyway, for the benefit of those who have been comparing Canzoneri with Leonard I want to say that it has always been my opinion that Leonard would have cut Tony to ribbons with straight lefts, and would have been a cinch to stop him inside of 15 rounds. I also think that Sammy Mandell would have licked Tony when in his prime.

It just happens that, fortunately for Canzoneri, most of the fighters around today have no left jabs to speak of at all.

"RING AROUND THE ROSEY"

Whenever people get together, there are many suggestions offered to make conditions better. Everyone seems to have some pet scheme, which will cure everything overnight.

There is one thing, so simple in application, that most of us overlook it, something we all do every week . . . go to the store, for groceries, drugs and a hundred and one different things. Now, if your store-keeper will buy what he sells you, from someone you work for, or someone that indirectly benefits you as a customer, he is making it possible for you to continue buying. The old "Ring Around the Rosey" idea.

Your HOME TOWN LEAGUE store-keeper is looking carefully over every item he stocks, so that when it is placed on the counter before you the store-keeper can say to himself . . . "Well, not only am I giving this customer a good product, but some of the money he pays me will find its way back to this town, because some of the town's people work in the plant that manufactures the product, others get paid for distributing it (railroad employees, trucking concerns, etc.), or money will be spent to advertise in the BRISTOL COURIER."

Patronize your HOME TOWN LEAGUE stores, look for the red and blue emblem on the windows.
